

OUR VISION

From our inception we have striven to serve as a Pan-Orthodox Church, for Orthodox Christians from many ethnic backgrounds; Ukrainian, Greek, Serbian, Lebanese, Russian, Jordanian, Romanian, Syrian, as well as those who converted to Orthodoxy by choice. Over the past 50 years, Holy Resurrection Antiochian Orthodox Church has grown from a small mission to a thriving church community! This growth would not have happened without the support and dedication of her many members. Holy Resurrection Orthodox Church continues to be an Orthodox beacon for Tucson. God willing, Holy Resurrection will continue to grow and be here for many years to come, serving and expanding the Orthodox community. May God grant Holy Resurrection Orthodox Church many more years of faithful worship and to continue doing God's will!

HOLY RESURRECTIONS HISTORY

The journey of Holy Resurrection Antiochian Orthodox Church has been a very long and arduous one, beginning with its inception as a mission on Pascha, April 13, 1969, with Father David Buss, Deacon Andrew Kish, a handful of local Tucson Orthodox parishioners, and a contingency from St. George Antiochian Orthodox Church in Phoenix. Fulfilling the need for an English-speaking Orthodox Church with approximately 75 Orthodox Christians in attendance, the inaugural service was held in the chapel of the Arizona Mortuary at 4601 E. First St.

For the next few months, Deacon Andrew Kish commuted from Glendale, Arizona to help the newly formed mission. In the summer of 1969, the Kish family moved to Tucson and Deacon Andrew was ordained to the Holy Priesthood on July 13, 1969, and was appointed as the first Pastor of HROC. As attendance grew over the next few months, services were moved from the chapel of the Arizona Mortuary to the Parish Hall of Grace Episcopal Church and the search for a more permanent home for the growing community began.
